First FARR 400 launched in Dubai

Posted on 28 March 2011 by Valencia Sailing

Premier Composite Technologies (PCT), the leading supplier of advanced composite components for the Marine and Architectural markets are today pleased to confirm the launch of the first FARR 400 – one week ahead of schedule.

PCT announced in January that they would be collaborating with Farr Yacht Design to build the next generation, all carbon, one design 40ft racer and In just under 3 months the first hull has hit the water having been launched today in Dubai.

The FARR 400 will under go a week of rigorous test sailings and will be pushed to the max by Prosailor Dee Smith, Naval Architect Luke Shingledecker from Farr Yacht Design and Bill O'Malley of Farr Yacht Sales, to ensure all components, including the Southern Spars Element C6 Carbon rigging, Grand Prix two-piece mast and Lewmar racing winch and deckgear, are performing to their maximum potential.

During the week of testing, Dobbs Davis will be on hand to measure the boat for IRC and ORC ratings. Press and prospective customers have also been invited to experience what is anticipated to be the next dominate one design racing machine.

Following test sailings, the FARR 400 will be shipped to Europe for a series of Spring/Summer European events to be announced next week.

To date, 10 boats have been sold, an impressive achievement considering the boat is being sailed for the first time today. The first of many FARR 400 one design regattas are being organized in Europe and the US for early 2012.
